

CLAAS ATOS 350

“The ATOS 350, a cracking little tractor”

Mr Hyde, Church Stretton, is predominantly a beef and sheep farmer. With around 60 Limousine cattle and calves and around 2,500 sheep at any one time, he is always on the go and needs a machine he can rely on.

“We have been dealing with MORRIS CORFIELD for a very long time. We have always dealt with them in one way or another. Whether it is for parts, service or buying machinery we have always found the team very friendly and helpful,” says Mr Hyde.

“We weren’t really looking for a new tractor, but we had an old Renault with a hefty number of hours on the clock. We had a chat with one of the salesmen at MORRIS CORFIELD and they offered us a really good price for the tractor, which sort of sparked the thought of changing to something a bit newer.

“The ATOS 350 is the perfect size and power for what we need, with the loader attached it is a great little tractor. We don’t need to have the huge horsepower machines, just something that does the job and is straightforward to operate and that’s what we have.”

“We are in a hilly area and so we need to have good weight to the ground. The ATOS 350 is brilliant on the hillsides. We have some Massey Ferguson tractors and I would choose the CLAAS every time if I was to go out on the hills, it is very stable. It’s also nice and comfortable to drive, I think it is a cracking little tractor,” explains Mr Hyde.

“The visibility is good for a loader tractor, we use it for feeding the stock and the bale handling. I have never had any problems with visibility.

“The ATOS 350 will be working every day feeding the stock, it would still only do around 500-700 hours in a year. It is a good workhorse. We have only ever had one problem and as always with MORRIS CORFIELD you can guarantee if something is wrong, they won’t stop until they put it right!

“On the ATOS 350 we have the standard mechanical transmission which works well for us. We like to have a good old gear stick, it’s just simple and easy to use.”

“MORRIS CORFIELD will always put something right if it is wrong. The whole team; sales, parts and service are all lovely and can’t do enough for you. They always make sure that we are looked after and feel like a valued customer,” comments Mr Hyde.
